

Ah, when to the heart of man
Was it ever less than a treason
To go with the drift of things,
To yield with a grace to reason,
And bow and accept the end
Of a love or a season?

from "Reluctance" by Robert Frost

---

---

Happy Trails to Blue

A big thank you on behalf of the Blue Parlor for making this year's readings such a success. In the course of 11 days, the Blue Parlor was rocked with the sounds of fiction, poetry, and nonfiction. Thank you to all that attended and read. Go forth and write!

Questions? Goodbyes? Contact Blue Parlor Duchess Nina McConigley.

