The Middlebury Bread Loaf School of English will offer a limited number of $8,890 Otway Fellowships for South Carolina public school teachers. The Fellowships will support summer study (two graduate courses) at the School of English in 2018. Fellows will be required to become active members of the Bread Loaf Teacher Network (BLTN), a state-of-the-art professional development network fostering pedagogical innovation and teacher research and advocacy year-round. Fellows will also become members of the Bread Loaf Teacher Network (BLTN), a nationally visible professional development network fostering innovative education and social action teaching and learning. Driven by the belief that students are education’s finest resources, BLTN teachers collaborate year-round with each other and their students on media-rich classroom projects and partnerships, with the shared goal of cultivating the leadership potential of students from underserved communities especially.

All fellowship applicants must be full-time teachers in a South Carolina public school: they must have completed a minimum of one year of teaching by June 2018 and must be teaching in a South Carolina school during the 2018-19 academic year. Applicants must also apply for admission to BLSE.

- First-year fellows will attend Bread Loaf’s Vermont campus and take two graduate courses, including one designated Group I course in writing, pedagogy, or literacy.
- All fellows must participate in weekly BLTN campus meetings and plan innovative pedagogical or research projects, to be carried out during the 2018-19 academic year in collaboration with other BLTN members.
- During the 2018-19 academic year, fellows must attend all meetings and participate in the activities of their BLTN state or local group.
- Fellows must submit three reports on their BLTN NextGen projects and activities.

Fellowship recipients will be chosen and notified on a rolling basis.
