Welcome!

We have organized Preview Days to give you a sense of what Middlebury is like not just academically, but environmentally and culturally as well. You’ve put in a lot of time and effort to get to this point—many of you have several exciting colleges from which to choose—and this visit is your opportunity to see how Middlebury feels to you.

Please don’t hesitate to ask questions as you consider whether Middlebury feels as if it could be home for you for the next four years. To help, we have put together a short list of questions prospective students often ask that can yield intriguing answers. Check it out on the back cover.

Feel free to spend one, two, or all three days with us—there is a lot to see and do.

Finally, please be sure to say hello at some point during your time with us on our beautiful campus. I’m looking forward to meeting each of you personally.

Have a great visit!

Sincerely,
Greg Buckles, Dean of Admissions

A sampling of the many things to do:

- Attend one of more than 200 classes in session.
- Stroll downtown and take the footbridge across Otter Creek Falls.
- Imagine yourself studying in one of the cozy armchairs in the Davis Family Library.
- Visit the College bookstore and peruse books written by our faculty.
- Try your hand at building in the ceramics studio, a student-run space dedicated to the art of being creative, destressing, and getting messy.
- Follow the path through the solar panels to the Organic Farm, where you can find out what’s being planted for the growing season.
- Stargaze from the rooftop observatory in McCordell Bicentennial Hall, Wednesday evening.
- Drop in at 51 Main, downtown, for dinner and a chance to hear diverse music and talented performers showcased in this popular spot.
- Hear four of Middlebury’s seven a cappella groups perform their latest arrangements.
- Check out the latest exhibition at the Museum of Art. Each admitted student who visits the museum during Preview Days will receive a free gift!
- Share your story or listen to others during the Middlebury Moth-UP! on Thursday night in the Gamut Room. The theme of the night is “new beginnings.”
- Sit in on talks during the annual Gensler Symposium, hosted by the Women’s Resource Center.
- Have lunch at a language table—where the diners are not speaking English.

And congratulations on your acceptance to Middlebury College, the leading global liberal arts college of the 21st century.
Some events are for students only. Some are for parents only.

We hope that students will attend the evening events without their family members, so they can spend time getting to know other students. Family members may want to spend the evening exploring downtown Middlebury.

These symbols will alert you to which events people are invited.
