Middlebury Institute Student Research and Projects
Appendix: Research Projects by Program
Welcome to the Middlebury Institute Immersive Learning, Research and Impact Report

The Middlebury Institute of International Studies draws a diverse group of professionals from around the globe to debate and solve issues that have plagued our world for decades. At the Institute, students are driven and mission-focused on making a positive impact in the world. They combine their passions and interests with gaining “real world” experience through internships and research projects. These interests drive students to study and learn across the globe, from the United Nations in New York looking at disarmament policies to a remote village in Myanmar working in program evaluation.

This impact report serves as a compilation of all of the internships and projects Middlebury Institute students have worked on and completed in the last year. The projects and internships students undertake have a direct impact on the communities they work in as well as their careers after graduation. Professional experiences offer students the opportunity to showcase their hard work and knowledge to potential employers. This report is the nexus of work done by students in their field using skills they built through their coursework at the Institute.

This report is comprised of three main sections: Semester Long Programs, January and Summer Group Onsite Practica, and Middlebury Institute Student Research and Projects. Each of these three sections provides an overview of various programs that faculty and staff have helped curate over the years to allow students to apply their knowledge in their fields of study. The report showcases the diverse interests of the Institute student body, which spans across degree programs, professional fields and geographic settings.

Sincerely,

Semester Long Special Programs

Part of the Institute’s mission is to help provide students with immersive, hands-on learning as part of their studies. Unlike other classroom-based graduate programs, these experiences allow students to apply practical skills in their field of study before graduation. Not only do they gain professional experience, but they are exposed to relevant networking opportunities that often lead to jobs after graduation.

International Professional Service Semester (IPSS)

Spring 2019

The International Professional Service Semester (IPSS) is one of the cornerstones for the Institute’s semester long programs. IPSS helps students secure graduate-level internships, jobs, or consultancies in international organizations in the U.S. and abroad. For many students, the IPSS experience acts as a stepping stone to a future career. The program’s networking possibilities and international exposure are just a few of the benefits students receive through their participation. An IPSS assignment complements a student’s degree focus by providing an applied learning environment for students to develop skills and knowledge not covered in traditional classes.

Design, Partnering, Management, and Innovation Practicum (DPMI Plus)

The Design, Partnering, Management, and Innovation Practicum (DPMI Plus) is a three- to nine-month professional internship that allows students to apply their DPMI skills in the field. Students work to create deliverables that clearly relate to the various tools, concepts, and frameworks taught in the DPMI curriculum. Students also create a case study that examines some DPMI-related issues confronting the organizations in which they are working. These issues may include project design, project monitoring, training, stakeholder participation, strategic partnering, social entrepreneurship, and innovation.

International Education Management Practicum

The three–semester MA in International Education Management (MA) program provides a rigorous, hands-on introduction to designing and facilitating meaningful international education programs. Throughout their studies and during a professional practicum during the final semester, students will demonstrate their achievement of the five IEM program learning goals: international education theory, program design and assessment, intercultural competency, resource generation, and resource management.

Frontier Market Scouts (FMS)

The award-winning Frontier Market Scouts (FMS) program provides intensive two-week certificate trainings that prepare participants for careers in the fields of social enterprise and impact investing. Through the combination of lectures and actionable projects, participants gain a comprehensive understanding of the key players in the impact sector. They also learn how to design an innovative impact-focused business model and what it takes to implement and scale a social venture.

Moscow State Institute of International Relations—Middlebury Institute Dual Degree Program Internships

Students enrolled in the dual degree program with the Middlebury Institute and Moscow State Institute of International Relations (MGIMO) are expected to complete a twelve-week internship related to WMD nonproliferation, nuclear policy, or global security. This internship takes place at in the final semester of a student’s study.

January & Summer Group Onsite Practica

Students can participate in a wide range of international and domestic immersive learning opportunities and on-site courses in January, during spring-break, and in the summer.

Design, Partnering, Management and Innovation: Kenya

DPMI training covers project planning, facilitation, and partnerships along with social marketing. For the Kenya cohort, there were 9 days of intensive classroom instructions and 3-4 days devoted to a “real-life” client project for the Aga Khan Foundation and Dream Achievers Youth Organization.

International Education Management Paris Practicum

Paris, France, January Term

International Education Management students travelled to the Middlebury School Abroad’s Centre Madeleine in Paris, France. This course served as an advanced elective course related to Study Abroad in which students experientially learned about the onsite management of international education programs, using Middlebury as the primary case study, as well as connecting with other program providers and universities in Paris and Lille who are involved with US education abroad.

Students collaborated with the Middlebury Paris Director and other program providers and local universities to complete projects that would benefit the organization and give students practical experience in education abroad management from the host country perspective.

Nuclear Research Reactor Practicum

Prague, Czech Republic and Vienna, Austria, January Term

This two-week course in Prague allowed students to attend lectures at the Department of Nuclear Reactors at the Czech Technical University (CTU), conduct experiments on the research reactor, and go on site visits. There was also a trip to the International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA) in Vienna, Austria. Not only did participants benefit from the fact that many Middlebury Institute alumni work at the IAEA, the Center for Nonproliferation Studies (CNS) has an office in Vienna: The Vienna Center for Disarmament and Nonproliferation (VCDNP).

Viva Cuba

Havana, Cuba, March 16–24, 2019

Cuba has much to teach about the costs and benefits of revolution and belated integration to a now globalized economy. Students explored the nature of the relationship between Cuba and the U.S. and the role of domestic politics in the design and execution of foreign policy.

Center for Blue Economy Fellows

The Center for Blue Economy Fellowship is supported by Middlebury Institute’s Center for the Blue Economy. This fellowship is open to students who specialize in the Ocean and Coastal Resource Management specialization within the International Environmental Policy degree. This fellowship gives students the opportunity to gain professional experience in the field of marine conservation.

Introduction to Language Program Administration Internship

This internship is a practical opportunity for students to gain valuable experience working directly with a language program administrator on relevant projects and initiatives that connect with the course material they learn in the language program administration course. Upon completion of the internship students complete a report about their experience, including details of their goals and tasks alongside readings/course concepts and connections to their future careers.

Teaching English to Speakers of Other Languages (TESOL)/Teaching Foreign Languages (TFL) Practicum and Applied Linguistics Capstones

The TESOL/TFL Program builds students’ capacity in three interrelated domains associated with language teaching: language/linguistics, pedagogy, and research. At the culmination of the program, students take two capstone courses. In the Practicum Capstone, they complete a semester-long internship that requires them to teach in an actual classroom in the greater Monterey Peninsula area and to hone their skills for entering into the job market. In the Applied Linguistics Capstone (ALC), they revise a data-based course project related to curriculum design, assessment, or research, which often involves collaborating with local or even (inter)national stakeholders.
