

Master of Arts in International Education Management

ONLINE and IN PERSON

Middlebury Institute of International Studies at Monterey

Alumna

Why did you choose the Middlebury Institute?

I wanted a school that would foster the skills I had learned living abroad into something marketable. The IEM program felt like it was tailor-made for me: I'd be able to continue using Spanish, and I would have the opportunity to gain hands-on experience through the practicum. And since I'm from Nebraska, the proximity to the ocean (and sea otters!) was a huge draw.

What made the Institute a special experience for you?

I got to have class with some of the most dynamic people I've ever met, and learn from professors who were generous with their time and knowledge.

What are you doing now?

I am an experiential learning program manager for the Andean Alliance for Sustainable Development in Peru. We work to leverage the knowledge and skills of high-altitude farming communities into more sustainable and ecological practices. I design, market, and run experiential and service education programs for North American students and get my hands dirty at our demonstration farm.

INTERNATIONAL EDUCATION MANAGEMENT (IEM)

Three Semesters Online or In Person

Gain the leadership training you need to manage global education programs. This three-semester master's is specifically designed to expand your professional expertise and network to advance your career.

THE MIDDLEBURY INSTITUTE ADVANTAGE

In your final semester, you will put theory to practice through a practicum, which can be your current work position or a new professional opportunity. Alternatively, you may conduct original research on an international education topic of your choosing. Many students leverage these opportunities for full-time job offers and promotions.

STUDY ONLINE OR IN PERSON

You have the flexibility to earn your master's online or in person at our Monterey, California, campus. You may easily switch between the two experiences as your personal and professional needs allow. Full-time and part-time options are available in either format.

Continue working as you study by taking part-time and/or online asynchronous courses.

CAREER OUTCOMES

We integrate your career and academic advising, making sure your coursework aligns with your career goals. The same advisor will guide you from course registration to preparing for interviews and negotiating new career opportunities.

Our graduates advance careers in education abroad, international student and scholar services, language programs, citizen diplomacy programs, government agencies, nonprofit organizations, and more.
