ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

Middlebury’s Spring Student Symposium is truly a communitywide effort, and there are many individuals to thank.

The Center for Teaching, Learning, and Research (CTLR) faculty and staff provided support and coordination for the symposium, especially Meghan Robbett and JoAnn Brewer and her student staff. With Shel Sax’s oversight, the Middlebury College Library and the Information Technology Services staff dedicated many essential hours to the symposium. We would especially like to thank Mike Roy and Jim Stuart for making their staff members available to support the event: Lisa Terrier and her distribution team, including Nate Burt and Brian Foley; Dan Frostman and the circulation staff; Carrie Macfarlane and the library liaisons; Billy Sneed and Jeff Lahaie of the central systems and network group; Joe Durante and the HelpDesk staff; Petar Mitrevski, Mack Pauly, David Wright, and the media services staff; and the academic technology group including Bill Koulopoulos, Joe Antonioli, Heather Stafford, Daniel Houghton, and the digital media tutors. Cathy Ekstrom, the McCardell Bicentennial Hall building coordinator, together with general event support, organized the poster sessions.

Michael Sheridan, Karen Guttentag, AnGayle (AJ) Vasiloiou, Marybeth Nevins, Amanda Crocker, and Brandon Baird served on the Spring Student Symposium Sessions Committee, creating an interdisciplinary event. Thanks to students Ruby Saavedra Andres ’17, Jerrica Davy ’17, Dorosi Valle Flores ’17, and Tatyana Parks ’18 who provided fresh perspectives and assistance. Pam McGuire, Valerie Costello, Stephen Diehl, Pam Fogg, and Sara Marshall designed posters, helped get the word out, and documented the event. Yonna McShane, Mack Roark, August Hutchinson ’16.5, Khan Kim ’19, and Oratory Now student coaches assisted students in preparing their talks and posters by providing excellent learning materials and workshops. Ian Martin, Megyn Pitner, and their catering team provided an outstanding menu. Amy Foote, Lisa Ayers, and Jen Irwin and her facilities staff supported the symposium’s logistical needs. Megan Curran facilitated arrangements within Johnson Memorial Building. We are grateful to all the people who served as moderators of presentation sessions.

We also thank Middlebury College faculty, whose mentorship and guidance have led to the student accomplishments we showcase today. Finally, we thank all of our student presenters for sharing their expertise and enthusiasm with our community, and we congratulate them on their accomplishments.

We also wish to acknowledge the internal and external funding sources without which many of today’s research projects and the symposium itself would not have been possible. In particular, we wish to acknowledge the Norbert K. Vaughn ’10 Memorial Fund, established in 2008 to honor Norbert’s memory and to support the annual symposium, an event that exemplifies his approach to scholarly inquiry.

SPRING STUDENT SYMPOSIUM

APRIL 21, 2017

Join us in celebrating the 11th annual Spring Student Symposium!

The symposium is a daylong event in McCordell Bicentennial Hall, with open exhibits in Johnson Memorial Building. Classes have been suspended for the day to allow all members of the Middlebury College community to join in this celebration of student research and creative achievement. What began in 2006 as an afternoon of poster and oral sessions with 60 student presenters has grown into an expansive program of academic and creative works from over 300 students. Although the symposium has changed over the years, it remains at its heart a multidisciplinary celebration of undergraduate work at Middlebury College.

The goal of a liberal arts education is to cultivate creative, independent learners. This symposium speaks to Middlebury’s pursuit of that goal. And so consider this program your guide into a rich world of inquiry and expression. Take a moment to plan the course of your day, explore the work of Middlebury students, and broaden your understanding of topics extending through the arts, the humanities, and the sciences.

Today’s symposium reflects Middlebury’s commitment to providing all students with undergraduate research and experiential learning opportunities. We applaud the accomplishments of our students, the mentoring and guidance of their sponsors, and the support of the Middlebury College community. We thank you for joining us to celebrate them.

Welcome to the 2017 Spring Student Symposium!

Welcome to Middlebury College’s 11th annual Student Symposium. Each April, students from first-years to seniors, across all academic disciplines, participate in this symposium. In presentations and poster sessions, performances, panels, and readings, they share their intellectual passions and discover what inspires their fellow classmates.

Today is a day for us to admire, appreciate, and celebrate both independence and collaboration. The work showcased here today is borne of original thought and independent inquiry and months of singular focus and effort. And yet, it also bears the hallmarks of partnerships with professors who worked alongside students in their creative and scholarly pursuits, providing instruction, mentorship, and guidance, and, most especially, encouraging curiosity.

Each of today’s presentations began with a curious moment that was allowed to grow. That curiosity about an unexplored idea then sparked inquiry, which then fueled exploration. The result of that inquiry might not always be what was expected. The path might not have been smooth. There may have been stops and starts and detours and a few dead ends. But that is part of the power and beauty of the exploration—the discovery of the unknown, the disproving of assumptions, the triumph of truth, the joy of the unexpected, the satisfaction of work well done.

I encourage all of the students—whose focus and hard work brought them here today—to take pride in embracing their curiosity and all that their independent explorations and their collaborations have made possible. We are honored to share today with them.

Sincerely,

President Laurie L. Patton

Undergraduate Research (URO) and Fellowships
In addition to overseeing the Spring Student Symposium, URO promotes opportunities for undergraduate research on and off campus, and works to identify new research opportunities for students. URO oversees funds supporting senior work, academic travel, and summer research. Fellowships staff provide advising for students seeking competitive national fellowship opportunities during their undergraduate years and after graduation. Both URO and fellowships programs are part of the Center for Teaching, Learning, and Research.
