

Middlebury School in Argentina

BUENOS AIRES

Buenos Aires, home of the tango, is famous for its 47 distinctive barrios, such as San Telmo and Recoleta. Shaped by immigrants from Europe, South America, western Africa, and eastern Asia, it has benefited from a truly multicultural pattern of migration. It features innumerable art galleries, museums, cinemas, and the Colón Theatre, one of the top three opera houses in the world. Any student interested in South American culture must visit Buenos Aires, where there is a lively youth culture.

The School in Argentina offers students the opportunity to enroll at one of three universities that are popular among Latin American students. Additionally, students may choose from a wide range of academic options, and we offer an intentionally designed Public Health track for students in sociology, social work, psychology, and health-related majors such as nursing and nutrition.

Host Institutions:

- Pontificia Universidad Católica Argentina
- Universidad de Buenos Aires
- Universidad Torcuato Di Tella
