

The following preliminary list of this fall's course offerings provides course names and sections organized by department and program. The list does not yet include specific course times, but it does provide the anticipated teaching modalities—such as in-person or hyflex—where available. We also invite you to review a list of modality descriptions, available elsewhere on this web page, which should help you understand the course list. We will explain more at an online academic forum in a couple of weeks. For now, please make use of these tips as you browse the list:

- Modalities that are available to all students, whether on-campus or remote, include “flexible online,” “scheduled online,” and “hyflex.”
- Modalities that require some physical presence include “blended” and “in-person.”
- Remember, for many courses, you’ll want to find a lecture and a matching lab, drill, or discussion that meets your needs.
